The Art of Promo

I've said it before, and I'll say it again: we can afford to be a little prouder of our profession! And yes, perhaps the tide is against us for a while — tougher economic conditions, additional regulations, and so on. But the essence of what we do remains a-ma-zing. What other medium manages to make the recipients of a message genuinely happy? Exactly!

If we tell that story more proactively — and make it clear to end customers that we are not nearly as polluting an industry as people assume, certainly not compared to many other media (more soon on groundbreaking international research that backs this up) — then, honestly, I see a very bright future ahead.

Back to PromZ Product Première and this year's theme: The Art of Promo. A theme that ties in seamlessly with the thought above. During this wonderful two-day event, let yourself be inspired by the most beautiful, most creative, and most effective products from our industry. Whether it's promotional products, workwear, or Christmas: you'll find it all in this "gallery." Enjoy!

TRADE SHOW THEME, HIGHLIGHTS AND PROMOTIONS

Trade show theme, highlights and promotions

Why The Art of Promo

The theme of PromZ Product Première 2026 is “The Art of Promo.” We put the developments within our industry in the spotlight, with a strong focus on innovation, quality, and sustainability. The products tell a story — just like the objects you encounter in a museum.

In a world that keeps accelerating, the trade show offers a valuable moment to pause: to look, to feel, and to discover the stories behind the products. It’s an opportunity to appreciate both the products and the relationships within our industry in a more conscious and meaningful way.

Promo, Workwear and Christmas

This year again, the trade show is divided into three pavilions. Because we believe these disciplines are increasingly converging and integrating, we’ve decided to give each its own identity — so that, as a distributor/intermediary/dealer, you can gather as much inspiration as possible and meet suppliers during a single visit.

The Art of Tasting

In the Christmas section of the trade show, you’ll find various companies inviting you to taste their products. This allows you to truly experience the quality and flavour. Participating companies include Zuivelhoeve, Sterk Stokers, Brand & Levie, and Florum Tulipa Gin.

VIP Box

If you have been invited as a VIP by one of the suppliers listed below, don’t forget to pick up your VIP box when leaving the exhibition floor. Inside you’ll find fun, practical and inspiring products for the year ahead. Enjoy! Participating companies are: PF Concept, XD Connects, Clipper Interall, Trendfactory, Roerdink Groothandel, Prodir, LogoChoc, and Zuivelhoeve. The box itself is produced by Boxid.

AWARDS

Why a textile industry award matters

In an industry that is constantly evolving — where materials become smarter, collections more sustainable, and service levels continue to rise — recognition is more than just a nice compliment. It's a confirmation of craftsmanship, vision, and the ability to create real value for customers. That is exactly why an industry award in the textile world is so important.

Within the categories of workwear, corporate wear, and promotional textiles/merchandise, everything comes together: innovation, reliability, creativity, and entrepreneurship. Dealers in these segments are the link between strong brands and demanding end users. They translate customer needs into solutions, provide tailored advice, and ensure that products are not only attractive, but also functional, safe, and aligned with an organisation's identity.

The title Dealer of the Year is therefore not an honour you receive lightly. It recognises companies that truly excel in their market — by delivering quality, spotting trends, working sustainably, and creating a customer experience that makes a difference. These dealers set the standard for the rest of the sector and show just how high the bar can be.

Especially at a time when the range of products is growing and customers are becoming more critical, an industry award helps provide direction. It highlights who leads the way, who dares to innovate, and who drives the industry forward. For the winners, it means greater visibility, increased trust, and a stronger market position. For the sector as a whole, it brings inspiration, motivation, and a healthy push to bring out the best in everyone.

That's why the annual moment when the awards are presented is so special. At the end of the first trade fair day (21 January at 5:00 PM), on the terrace of the Workwear Square, the industry comes together to honour the very best dealers. It's a place where conversations flow, colleagues connect, and achievements built up throughout the year are celebrated.

On that terrace, something beautiful happens: pride, connection, and a shared sense that good work deserves to be seen. The industry award is not an end point — it's a starting point for even more ambition, collaboration, and growth.

Workwear becomes a fully-fledged category

Anyone who takes a close look at the floor plan of PromZ Product Première 2026 will see it immediately: workwear, corporate wear, and promotional textiles are no longer supporting acts on the show floor. They have become a fully-fledged category — one that, over the past few years, has shifted toward the center of our industry almost unnoticed, yet inevitably. And honestly: the days when workwear was a niche for a handful of specialized dealers are long behind us.

Why? Because workwear is no longer just functional. It's identity. It's visibility. It's brand experience in its purest form. An employee wearing a modern, well-fitting set of workwear projects reliability and professionalism. And that's exactly where the category connects with the world of promotional textiles. Whether it's a technical work trouser, a smart polo, or a hoodie for an onboarding kit — clothing tells a story. And that story is increasingly becoming an integral part of companies' brand strategies.

That's why, as an editorial team, we believe workwear and promo are rapidly converging. The lines are blurring. A company that invests in sustainable, certified workwear often also wants a strong promotional range that matches the same look and feel. And the reverse is true as well: distributors who traditionally focused on promotional textiles are noticing that their customers are increasingly asking for more professional, functional clothing options. It's simply a logical result of how organizations view branding today.

At PromZ Product Première 2026, this development will be visible in the diversity of exhibitors. From major international workwear brands to specialized corporate wear suppliers and textile producers with a strong focus on sustainability and customization — the category is broader than ever. The trade show provides a platform that not only highlights current trends, but above all reflects the growing demand in the market.

And let's be honest: a trade fair is where the strength of this category truly comes to life. You can feel, try on, and compare. Assess fabrics, discuss certifications, explore personalization options. You can spot the differences between good, better, and best quality at a glance. That's valuable for distributors — and for suppliers who want to tell their story to an audience that is becoming more critical and more professional.

The integration of workwear into the promotional world is not a hype — it's a structural shift. Demand is growing, quality is rising, and the overlap with corporate identity increases every month. That's why it is essential for this category to be prominently represented at PromZ Product Première.

Because in the end, everything comes down to one question: how do you help your customer make their brand stronger, more visible, and more consistent? Workwear, corporate wear, and promotional textiles play a key role in that. And that is precisely why this category deserves the stage it will get in 2026.

Christmas leaves you wanting more

Anyone who thinks Christmas on the trade show floor is synonymous with “a few atmospheric gifts and some seasonal inspiration” clearly hasn’t seen PromZ Product Première 2026. The Christmas category has grown into a fully-fledged, strategic player within the promotional market. And this year, that position gains an extra dimension with the introduction of The Art of Tasting — a pavilion where tasting, experience, and brand presentation come together in a truly unique way.

Why is Christmas so important? Because it’s the moment when companies want to express gratitude, connect, and surprise. And that’s exactly why Christmas has, for years, been one of the most creative, competitive, and impactful segments in our industry. Corporate gifts are becoming more luxurious, more sustainable, more personal — and increasingly curated as a complete brand experience. A simple box of pralines no longer cuts it; it has to tell a story. Something that fits the company, the recipient, and the spirit of the times.

That’s precisely why we see the Christmas category becoming more professional year after year. Suppliers are investing in high-end food concepts, sustainable packaging, curated gift sets, customization options, and premium brands. At the same time, companies are asking for differentiation: how do I make sure my Christmas gift isn’t just one of many, but sets the tone for the new year?

And that’s where The Art of Tasting comes in. For the first time, the Christmas category will have its own dedicated experience area at the show — a space where quality, calm, and sensory temptation take center stage. Not loud, not overcrowded — but a warm pavilion where visitors and suppliers can genuinely connect. A place where you don’t just see products, but smell, taste, and experience them.

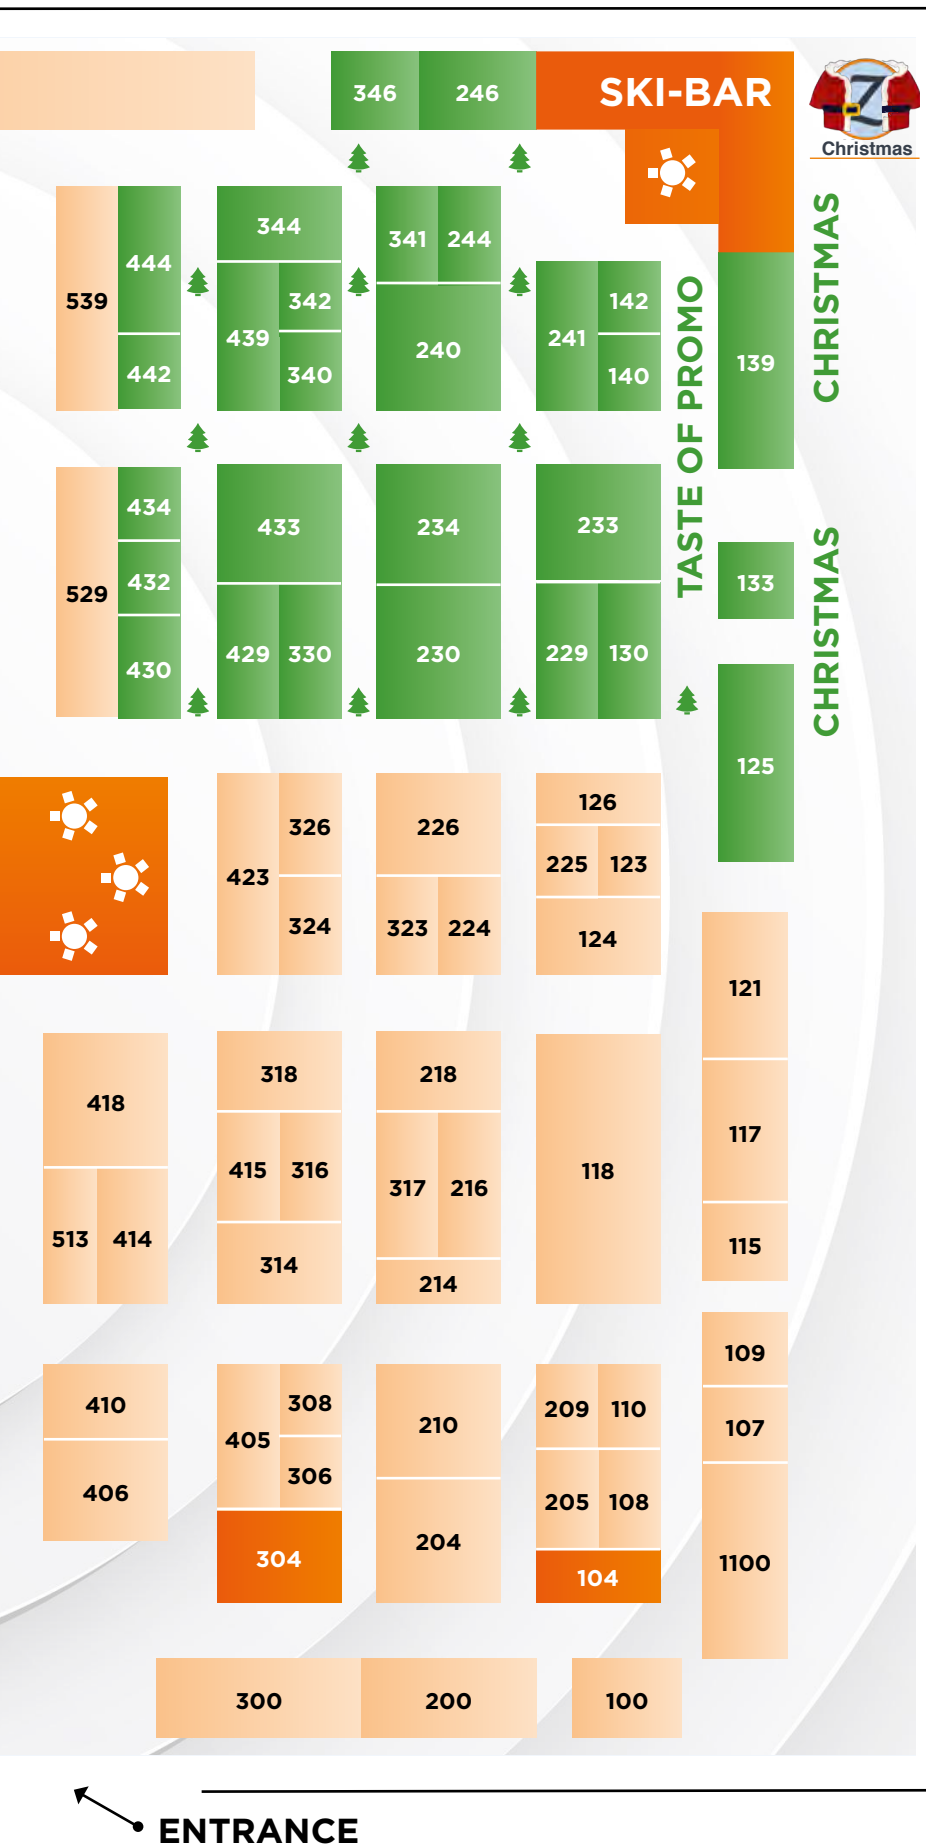

The Christmas category is also moving in step with broader market trends: more sustainability, more premium, more storytelling. Christmas gift sets are becoming curated experiences. Chocolate becomes craft. Wine is selected based on origin and narrative. And food gifting is increasingly linked to branding, personalization, and custom packaging.

That makes the category more relevant than ever this year. Christmas isn’t an add-on; it’s a strategic moment when companies show appreciation and strengthen relationships. And that’s exactly why it’s essential for distributors to experience the latest concepts, flavours, and presentations live.
